CAR-LOT SHIPMENTS OF FRUITS AND VEGETABLES IN THE UNITED STATES IN 1916.

By PAUL FROEHLICH, Assistant in Market Surveys.[1]

APPRECIATION.

To the local freight agents and other representatives of transportation lines whose reports have made possible the publication of this bulletin, the sincere appreciation of the Bureau of Markets is extended. This work is the combined product of the contributions of many thousands of individual reporters throughout the country, and acknowledgment is made of their cooperation.

CRITICISMS ARE INVITED of the statistics presented in this publication. An official post card, which requires no postage, is inclosed, and on this card constructive suggestions are desired by which the contents of similar volumes may be improved.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT.

One of the established features of the work of the Bureau of Markets is a system of mail reports of carload shipments of all kinds of fresh or dried fruits and vegetables. This was instituted in the spring of 1916, when the Bureau sent to about 25,000 agents of the various carriers which handle these commodities blanks for reporting each car-lot shipment. The agents were instructed to mail a card for each carload of fruits or vegetables billed from their respective stations. Most of the reports were in the form of postal cards of the design shown on the page following.

[1] The Transportation Section of the Bureau of Markets perfected the arrangements with the carriers for the system of daily mail reports which have made possible the compilation of this bulletin. The system has been developed under the general supervision of Wells A. Sherman, Specialist in Market Surveys. The corps of clerks who actually compiled and verified the tabulations was led by Henry Hawxhurst, of the Market Surveys Project.

REVISED

CARLOAD FORWARDING REPORT

FOR

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

OF

ALL FRESH OR DRIED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES,

NOT INCLUDING CANNED GOODS OR SUGAR BEETS.

INSTRUCTIONS TO AGENT.

1. Use a separate card for each car.
2. Make a report every day that a carload shipment is loaded at your station, or at a nonagency station for which you do the waybilling, for forwarding over your line.
3. Include nothing rebilled from a connecting line except shipments from a boat line and cars received from a switching line or from another line in switching service.
4. Shipments billed out of storage or storage-in-transit, report as originating at your station.
5. Include imports by water, and all rail imports via your station.

A different form of postal card was sent to the agents of boat lines. Upon these forms unload reports were secured which also stated the points of loading, with the quantity of each commodity forwarded from each point. The quantity was usually expressed in packages or pounds and was reduced in this Bureau to equivalent carloads.

There were received during 1916 reports of the shipment of 634,175 carloads, originating or billed at 8,798 railroad stations and steamboat wharves.

The purpose of this bulletin is to present in tabulated form the information which has thus been gathered. It is designed to give shipping information only. It does not purport to give all the points or areas of production or to represent their relative importance. For example, Baltimore, Md., is reported as having shipped 237 carloads of sweet potatoes and 2,170 carloads of white potatoes. It is known, however, that but few of these are grown in the immediate vicinity of that city. A large number are hauled in from Anne Arundel County in trucks, wagons, and small boats. These are sold to dealers, who ship them out to other points. For a similar reason the importance as a producing area of that part of New Jersey near Philadelphia is not fairly represented by the figures showing the shipments from the stations within that territory. Since Philadelphia consumes large quantities of fruits and vegetables, the importance of the adjacent producing areas is not indicated even by the shipments from that city. Similar conditions exist around many other cities and towns. Canneries and drying plants located in producing sections also increase the difficulty of gauging the total production of a section by the shipments reported.

The methods by which most railroads keep their records make it impracticable to distinguish between cars actually loaded at a given point and cars reshipped from that point; therefore, if our reports were complete the total carload shipments would exceed the surplus production of those States which contain numerous storage and distributing points from which large quantities of fruits and vegetables are reshipped. The shipments from a number of seaports include many cars which were imported. While there are a few commodities, such as bananas, which are not grown in this country, there are many others, such as oranges, lemons, and onions, which are of both foreign and domestic origin. As to the latter, it is impossible to determine how many are of domestic origin and therefore already covered by reports from the stations where grown. There is much duplication of this sort in this bulletin, and the reader must not assume that all the shipments credited to large cities and to certain important railroad junctions were of crops actually grown at those points.

Notwithstanding these duplications, the general and prevalent error is one of incompleteness or deficiency. The system of mail reports was not put in operation until after the movement of many crops had begun. It was therefore necessary to request agents to go back over their books and supplement our figures, that we might show the whole year's movement. From many stations it was impracticable to secure complete reports. If only a small number of agents overlook or misunderstand instructions the result is a loss of many cars from the report.

Another cause of shortage is the fact that less than car-lot shipments have been almost wholly ignored. This shortage, while general, is most pronounced in the case of those commodities which are usually shipped in small bulk and for local use, such as berries and green vegetables. This is illustrated by a comparison of the northern and southern strawberry crops. Most southern berries leave the producing point in carloads, while the majority of those grown in the North go into near-by markets in smaller shipments.[1]

However, in the statistical tables devoted to the trucking crops of the Norfolk (Va.) section, the car-lot shipments reported by the carriers have been increased by the total equivalent carloads estimated to have been forwarded in less than car-lot shipments and by boat. This is true also of the shipments reported from the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia. These are two important sections from which reports of the less than car-lot movement were available. On the other hand, the statistics on Minnesota potato shipments appear somewhat smaller than normally because one important carrier furnished reports for the year ended June 30, 1917, instead of for the calendar year 1916.

With but few exceptions the stations listed are those at which there are agents authorized to do way-billing. During 1916 these agents were not requested to give the name of the station at which the commodities were loaded, but only the name of the billing station. In some instances, however, the name of the loading station was furnished instead of the billing station. In most of these cases an effort was made to determine the stations at which the shipments were billed. In general, it was assumed that the first agency station in the direction the shipment was moving would be the one which billed the car. It is realized, however, that this is not always the rule, and that therefore some carloads may have been credited to the wrong billing station.

In general, the shipping season given for each county includes the earliest and latest dates of car loading from any station in the county.

[1] See Sherman, W. A., Walker, H. F., and Schleussner, O. W., Strawberry Supply and Distribution in 1914. Bulletin 237, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

In some instances, however, where information as to the exact shipping season was not available, it was necessary to use the first and last dates reported for the calendar year. In the few cases where shipping dates were not reported, the season was approximated by references to the dates reported from near-by counties. On those commodities whose shipping seasons extend from one calendar year to the next, the season for each county was obtained from the report of the first shipment of the season in 1916 and the closing shipment of the season in 1917. In those cases where no reports are on file for 1917, both the dates for 1916 are taken. It must be remembered, however, that while the shipping dates on those commodities extend from one year to the next, the number of carloads given is the number shipped during the calendar year 1916. The shipping seasons for dry beans and peas are omitted because the information at hand was too meager to be of any value. The shipping seasons for California citrus fruits are not defined because those commodities are shipped practically the whole year from most of the counties in which they are produced.

The statistical tables devoted to dry beans and peas fail to convey an adequate idea of the importance of those crops. Station agents were not requested to include those commodities in their daily reports until the beginning of 1917. Our data for 1916 are very incomplete, being based on reports of shipments voluntarily furnished by the agents. They are also incomplete because much of the movement is in box cars, and complete reports were not available as to the shipments from the West in other than refrigerator cars. This last statement applies also to shipments of dried fruit, particularly dried prunes, and other commodities which may be forwarded in box cars.

A large quantity of deciduous fruit is billed from California as "green fruit" because the cars contain various kinds of fruits, such as apricots, cherries, grapes, nectarines, peaches, pears, persimmons, plums, pomegranates, and quinces. This explains why, in the table devoted to mixed fruit, such a large number of shipments is credited to California, and why a comparatively small number of cars of the specific deciduous fruits is credited to that State.
